Dear Pinchy, Snowy, & Mango:

I enjoyed meeting all three of you yesterday, and I want you to know how lucky you are to have such caring owners. I was lucky to visit the school where you live. The principal and teachers showed me every room, let me meet lots of students, and explained the many projects the students complete.

I am impressed beyond words with how much the people in your classroom do for you. The blueprint of your home is most impressive, and I can't get over the time and care that went into building Crab City. I also enjoyed hearing about how the students sing to you and how you like to come out and move around the City when you hear their music.

I want you to know that the students who care for you have done a lot to learn about the many things that surround us. They have learned about cities, and bugs, and bees, and plants, and art, and each other, and so much more I don't have room to list them all. These students learn so much that will help them now and later on in life, and I hope you are as proud of them as I am.

The adults at your school and I are going to try to teach the Indiana General Assembly about what happens at St. Mary's. We love the way the students there learn so much, and we want more kids in more schools to be able to build their own Crab Cities. This could take a very long time, and we may not get it done, but we know that we need to try. If your friends and relatives tell you that they suddenly have found fantastic new places to live, you will know that we succeeded.

Sincerely,
